COURT SENDS MRS. PITZ TO A STATE HOSPITAL

Woman Found Not Guilty of Slaying Husband, Because of Insanity, to Get Treatment

MUST BE DECLARED SANE TO GET HER FREEDOM NOW

Mrs. Adolph Beyers, who was found guilty of murdering her husband, Frank Pitz, by shooting him through the head, because she was insane at the time has been ordered sent to the northern hospital for insane at Winnebago, by Judge James Wickham Saturday morning.

The court order committing Mrs. Pitz to the hospital says, "she is dangerous and insane, and should be committed to the hospital for treatment." Mrs. Pitz, it is understood, may now ask for a re-examination by the hospital authorities. It is understood that the findings of the examining physicians must be passed upon by a judge or jury and if approved by them, Mrs. Pitz will be discharged from the state hospital and given her freedom.

CHRISTMAS OPENING FRIDAY NIGHT PROVES A GLORIOUS SUCCESS

LA CROSSE'S second community Christmas opening was held Friday night under the most auspicious conditions. A beautiful evening, clear, snappy, but not cold, brought thousands of people down town to view the beautiful windows and Christmas stocks.

In order to gain points of vantage, the crowd began to assemble shortly after seven o'clock. When the lights were turned on at the first stroke of eight, Main street and the adjacent business streets were filled with an eager crowd that overflowed the sidewalks in places.

As the lights flashed on, there was a concerted movement on the part of the crowd. Many took advantage of the opening of the stores and crowded into the various establishments to feast their eyes on the lavish display of Christmas goods; but by far the greater number began an impromptu procession from one window to another. The primary object was a search for the prizes that each window contained, but the last window displays were by no means neglected. Seldom has there been such a uniformly beautiful window display.

The crowd reached its greatest proportions about eight-thirty, and many remained on the streets until after ten o'clock. The enjoyment was further heightened by a program of stirring music rendered by the band which moved from one corner to another.

In the various stores, the salespeople were in their places, giving advice and assisting in the preparation of Christmas gift lists, but no goods were sold. The buying season was inaugurated Saturday morning.

ROSE PALEN GIVEN DIVORCE; GAY TIMES MENTIONED IN SUIT

Roadhouses, "Other Women" Alleged to Have Taken Away Emil Palen's Affections

MRS. ELINOR EDBERG, MRS. CHARLES GUNN GET DIVORCES

Sheldon Weber to Pay Monthly Alimony of $75 to Divorced Wife

COMPLAINING that her husband fell under the spell of a "mid-summer madness" and hit the grey trail that led to various roadhouses outside of the city limits last summer, Mrs. Rose Palen sued her husband, Emil Palen, a plumber, for divorce. She was granted a decree by Judge Higbee, who heard divorce cases in his chambers Saturday morning.

In a stipulation filed with the court Palen agrees to pay his wife $1,000 in settling the case. Palen did not make an appearance in court or contest the suit.

Mrs. Palen alleged that since their marriage in 1904, Palen has treated her in a cruel and inhuman manner, lying into almost daily outbursts of anger and heaping vile and abusive language on her. The climax apparently was reached in May, 1922, and continued throughout the summer.

Mrs. Palen in her complaint named women with whom Palen was unduly friendly. Gay parties at Kleiner's country club, "Chicken Tavern," Wildwood Inn and in a cottage on French Island, at which Palen entertained the above mentioned women, and at which "moonshine and other ardent liquors" were consumed, were mentioned in the wife's complaint.

Mrs. Elinor Edberg was granted a divorce from Edgar Edberg. Mrs. Edberg alleged that she was deserted several years ago.

Mrs. Lydia Gunn was granted a divorce from Charles J. Gunn. They had been separated for several years. Sheldon Orville Weber, Burlington brakeman, from whom his wife, Anna Weber, obtained a divorce several weeks ago, was ordered to pay $75 a month alimony. The amount of alimony was not fixed at the time the divorce was granted as there was some doubt as to just what Weber earned. Figures were obtained later and presented to the court, whereupon the amount of the monthly alimony was fixed.

GEORGE SATO SPEAKS AT MORNING SESSION OF Y. M. CONFERENCE

Problems of Japan are Presented to Boys in Session at Congregational Church

OPPORTUNITY FOR GREAT WORK IN INDIA SAYS MCLELLAND

Five Minute Talks by Delegates of Interest

AN inspiring message from the east was delivered at the morning session of the Older Boys' Conference of the Y. M. C. A. held Saturday morning at the Congregational church, when George Sato of Japan, at present a student at Wayland Academy, Beaver Dam, told of the crying need of the Japanese people for the uplifting influence of spiritual civilization.

In his brief talk Mr. Sato traced the history of the Japanese people from the time of their first awakening to the importance of events of the outside world, precipitated 70 years ago by the visit of Commodore Perry and the American fleet, until the present day. Japan adopted the customs of the western world rapidly, said Mr. Sato, "and soon acquired the greatest things of the western materialistic civilization. There was one all important thing that was overlooked, however, and that was the spiritual civilization of Christianity.

Establishes Schools

"Japan has splendid schools. She realized early that without education, her new found civilization could make little real progress, and established schools with good teachers in every town and hamlet. At present the ratio of illiteracy in Japan is lower than in most of the countries of the world.

"Japan is one of the five great world powers. She has a well organized constitutional government, a great commerce and industry built up, a prosperous foreign trade and in the number of armaments she is one of the world leaders. Her reconstruction has been marvelous, but it has been an imitation of the western countries. It is now time for Japan to pause and consider, and she already has begun to do so. The Japanese people realize that Christianity is necessary if the good brought about by the national awakening is to be of any permanence. They are hungering for Christianity and many of the national leaders are of Christian belief. Japan is ready to accept Christianity.

WOMAN KILLED ON RAILROAD CROSSING HERE

Mrs. Frances Jablowick, 54, Struck by Milwaukee Switch Engine at Liberty Street Crossing

WAS ENROUTE TO WORK WITH HER 16-YEAR-OLD DAUGHTER

No Watchman on Duty at Crossing at Time of Accident, Officials Say

TEN children were left orphans Saturday morning when Mrs. Frances Jablowick, aged 54, 723 Charles street, was instantly killed by a Milwaukee switch engine at the Liberty street crossing about 6:20 o'clock. She was accompanied by her 16-year-old daughter, Pelagia, at the time of the accident, both being enroute to work at the Lorillard Tobacco company.

Killed Instantly

That Mrs. Jablowick was instantly killed when struck by the locomotive was the declaration of police and Milwaukee officials who arrived on the scene shortly afterward. Coroner Raymond C. Dwyer, who took charge of the body, stated that there was a deep gash in the skull, a broken left arm, and both legs were cut off above the ankle.

According to the police report, substantiated by W. A. Springer, yard master of the Milwaukee road, the woman and her daughter had started over the crossing, passing behind a train going eastward in the yards. Mrs. Jablowick was struck on the further track north by the switch engine traveling at a rate of about 8 or 10 miles an hour, it was said. At the yard master's office it was explained that there were two unoccupied tracks between the train which they had passed behind and the track on which the woman was struck.

Hear Girl's Cry

No intimation that anyone had been struck came to the engineer in the cab until he heard the cries of the daughter, according to the report. The locomotive was quickly stopped and Mrs. Jablowick's body was removed from underneath between the locomotive and tender, the police said. The woman had evidently been struck by the front footboard on the left side of the engine, being carried some distance before falling between the tracks.

Milwaukee officials explained that both of the women saw the locomotive coming, but that Mrs. Jablowick fell on the track, according to the girl's statement. The daughter, in her attempt to rescue her mother, was pushed aside by the locomotive. Police made no statement, pointing out that Mrs. Jablowick had fallen on the track ahead of the engine.

No Watchman on Duty

It was said at the yard master's office Saturday that there was no watchman on duty at the time of the accident. A watchman is employed on the crossing during the day only. It was said, coming on duty at 8 o'clock each morning. There are no gates at the Liberty street crossing.

Mrs. Jablowick was the mother of 10 children, whom she had been forced to provide for after the death of her husband several years ago.

1,500 AT FUNERAL OF BRIDE WHO DIED ON WEDDING MORN

GREEN BAY, Wis.—Hundreds of friends of Odile Gilson, of Dyckesville, near here, whose wedding day last Tuesday was terminated with her own death as a result of burns, which she received while trying to start a fire in the kitchen stove, walked in sorrow Saturday at the bride-to-be's funeral instead of being present at a happy, care-free throng, celebrating the return of a happily wedded couple. More than 1,500 people attended the services, heaping the casket with flowers.

WOMAN SECRETARY OF ANTIGO CHAMBER QUILTS

ANTIGO, Wis.—Mrs. L. L. Dickson, secretary of the Antigo Association of Commerce for about five years, has resigned the position. She was the only woman holding a position of this kind in Wisconsin and has done excellent work, including development of a complete credit bureau.

ORE SHIPMENTS LARGER

SUPERIOR, Wis.—Shipments of ore from Lake Superior for the season just closing total $5,020,830 tons, excluding the Escanaba docks which still are operating. The total for 1921 was 21,494,090 tons. It is estimated that the Escanaba shipments will reach four million tons.

NEW PROGRESSIVE BLOC IS DECLARED LEGISLATIVE IN CHARACTER, NOT POLITICAL

WASHINGTON.—The purposes of the new "progressive" movement inaugurated Friday by the organization of the "progressive bloc" in congress, were declared formally to be legislative and not political, in resolutions adopted Saturday at a general public conference.

Senator La Follette, republican, Wisconsin, who, with Representative Huddleston, democrat, Alabama, called the conference under the auspices of the People's Legislative Service, presided over the general public gathering which was attended by more than 100 members of congress, governors and other leaders. Representative Woodruff, republican, Michigan, was elected secretary of the conference, which will close with a dinner Saturday night.

The first resolution adopted by the convention declared that the movement was "nonpartisan" and would devote itself to "consideration of devising methods and means for co-operation and support" of the general legislative program adopted Friday by the new progressive congressional bloc. At the suggestion of President Gompers of the American Federation of Labor, the resolutions had been amended to declare the movement "nonpartisan" instead of "non-political."

Time Ripe for Movement

In opening the conference as chairman of the People's Legislative Service, Senator La Follette said the time appeared opportune for the progressive movement and there seems to be a mandate growing out of the election for a movement to "advance the interests of the people." He declared organization of the new bloc was the "greatest and most encouraging thing" in his experience.

"It is proposed," said Senator La Follette, "that each legislative step shall be well grounded and not all at one stroke."

Badger on Resolutions Body

A committee on resolutions was appointed, headed by Frederic C. Howe, former immigration commissioner at New York. Other members designated include Representative John M. Nelson of Wisconsin.

A special committee to draft separate resolutions declaring for a national movement for direct primaries was headed by former Representative Keating of Colorado.

Speeches urging aid for farmers were made by Senators-elect Wheeler of Montana and Frazier of North Dakota. They said the farmers were not receiving the cost of production and were suffering from high freight rates and car shortage. An investigation of the car situation was advocated by Mr. Wheeler.

Farmers Demand Results

Declaring that "the present administration is trying to forestall any action by the progressives and steal their thunder" on the question of farmer relief, Mr. Wheeler said the northwest wanted results and was not particular about the form of credit received.

Farm prices should be fixed and stabilized, it was declared by Senator-elect Frazier, who said both state and federal aid was needed by farmers.

Referring to administration plans for farm credit, Mr. Frazier said that lower money rates would not alone be sufficient to aid farmers but they also must get better prices for their products.

"Something must be done to help the farmers," said Mr. Frazier, "or the nation will go broke as the farmers have gone broke."

Blaine on Program

In introducing Governor Blaine of Wisconsin, Senator La Follette said that a number of other progressive governors were prevented from attending by the meetings of their legislatures, but that a conference of progressive governors in January was planned to formulate a program of progressive action.

Court Interprets Law

Mr. Donovan read that part of the statute to the court that he contended covered the complaint in the case. The court then informed him that the law clearly stated that suit could be started at the expiration of three months, if the losses had been paid to a stakeholder. As this case, the winners, Carey and Jones, getting the money directly, the court held that the second part of the law that puts a time limit of six months on starting of the suit, applied in the Hatch case.

As Messrs. Donovan and Gleiss seemed undecided as to what would be the next step the court ordered a short recess. Mr. Doherty conferred with Carey and Jones. Messrs. Donovan and Gleiss "bumped heads" and then all three attorneys got their heads together. When the court resumed the session again the attorneys announced that they could not reach an agreement.

The jury was then called and sworn. As the lawyers were going over the list of names to select the twelve for the case, they got into another conference. Mr. Doherty made another hurried trip back to Carey and Jones, who were sitting well back in the court room among the spectators and returned in a few moments to the attorneys' table and resumed his confab with Messrs. Donovan and Gleiss. After the expiration of several minutes, during which time the court patiently waited and the eyes of all of the spectators in the court room were riveted on the three lawyers, Mr. Donovan and Mr. Doherty told the court that they had reached a settlement.

The case was over. The judge excused the jurors subject to call and the spectators filed out of the court room. The expected "fireworks" did not materialize.

FOOTBALL STAR GIVES A TALK FRIDAY NIGHT

E. H. Gibson Calls Upon Older Boys to Help Put Down Professionalism in Football

REV. M. J. BIEBER PLEADS FOR MORE TO ENTER MINISTRY

Interesting and Entertaining Features Mark Twentieth Annual Meeting

THE twentieth annual Older Boys' conference got away to a flying start yesterday, with much enthusiasm on the part of the delegates and an eagerness on the part of the leaders and speakers to render the Older Boys of the state great service. Approximately 450 boys from out of La Crosse have been received as delegates. The speakers of the day spoke of these boys as the "cream of the boys of the state," for they are all especially chosen because of character, leadership qualities, and so forth, to represent the towns and cities from which they came.

The first regular session of the conference opened at 4:15 Friday afternoon at the Congregational church, the conference church, with Lowell Frautschi, the conference president, presiding. The first number on the program was an organ selection by Miss Ethel Mulder of La Crosse. Song singing followed in which all the delegates took part. Rev. C. R. Sluiter of La Crosse gave an invocation and

Monkey Attracts Attention

Last evening, the general public of the city was highly amused when it found a small live monkey in its midst, during the Christmas evening. It was carried in the arms of a young man who is attending the 20th Older Boys' conference. It was a playful little fellow and amused as well as astonished the more sedate residents of this city with his comical antics. It is a South American Marmoset monkey, and being exceedingly rare, is valued at over $200. It was attached to its master's arm by a small chain to avoid its escaping—in search of Santa Claus, perhaps. It is a rare treat for the citizens of La Crosse to see a real live, pet monkey. This is just becoming the vogue in eastern cities, from whence the young man just recently returned.

was followed by Rev. C. C. Rowleson of La Crosse, who gave a speech of greeting to the visitors. Rev. E. C. Dixon, also of this city, then read from the scriptures. Ted Schroeder made a few announcements after which Rev. M. J. Bieber, Minneapolis, was introduced. Rev. Bieber is the superintendent of the Northwest synod of the United Lutheran church. He gave a very interesting and inspiring speech in which he said:

Are Future Leaders

"We welcome you, boys, who represent the cream of the cities from which you come. You are the future leaders of this nation. Looking at your faces, I see judges, bankers, merchants, lawyers, engineers and all such professions which shall some day make you leaders of our country. You come here to learn to put manhood and vigor to work, and work in the right channel." In continuing a discussion of what Christianity really is and how it should be applied to the above commercialism, he said, "I take it for granted that you are all Christians, but if there are any here now who are not Christians, take it for granted that you will have decided to become Christians after hearing all the talks and discussions at the Older Boys' conference. I take it for granted that you all have a Bible and believe in that Bible."

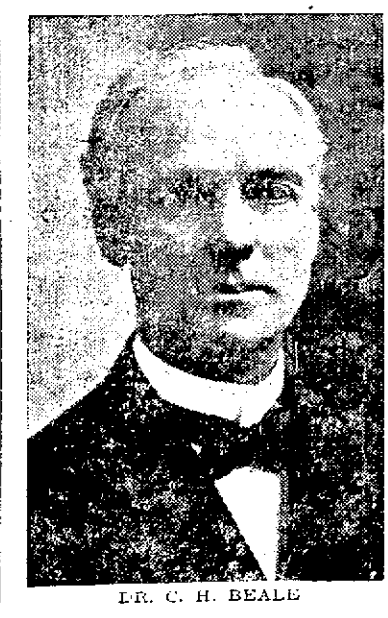

Continuing, Rev. Bieber brought stress on the point that we are the sons of God and not descendants of the age. He characterized the American people as a class that thinks more of the Almighty dollar than of Christ, and he pleaded to the boys before him to become true followers of Christ.

Appeals for Ministers

In his appeal for more boys to take up the ministry as a profession, where they can do a great piece of service, Rev. Bieber analyzed the word ministry according to letter and defined

NORMAL REGENTS HAVE JOB FILLING PEARSE'S PLACE

May Take Months to Find Suitable Man for Milwaukee Presidency Says Van Auker

The state board of normal regents has a big job on its hands in the filling of the vacancy caused by the resignation of President Carroll G. Pearse of the Milwaukee Normal school, according to Charles S. Van Auker of this city, president of the board.

"When we were called upon recently to appoint a new president of the Superior school," said Mr. Van Auker, "we had forty applications. All candidates for the place had to be investigated and local educational authorities were consulted before we finally voted the elimination contest and made a choice."

"The same procedure will be followed in filling the vacancy at Milwaukee," provided Mr. Pearse's resignation is accepted. Mr. Pearse asks to be relieved of his duties on January 1. It is hardly possible we will be able to select his successor in that time. It takes time to pass upon the qualification of a large field of candidates for such an important place. Three or four months were occupied in filling the vacancy at Superior."

Reasons For Resignation

Prof. Pearse sums up his reasons for resigning as follows:

"Failure of the board to make a strong attempt to meet the obligation resting upon the normal school system to undertake certain lines of educational service for teachers of the state."

"Failure to meet the pressing needs for new buildings at the Milwaukee Normal school."

"Elimination by the board of the fine arts department at Milwaukee Normal school."

"Proposed abolishment of college courses now successfully carried on in Normal schools."

"Continued submission of the board to hampering legislation and administrative restrictions without protest."

"I am not able to agree with the majority of the board of regents as to the wisdom of the policy which, in framing the budget for the coming biennium, omits to include provision for meeting many pressing needs of normal schools which in my judgment should be presented in full, even though full satisfaction of them should not be immediately practicable," Mr. Pearse said in a letter which accompanied his resignation.

Although Mr. Pearse had his resignation ready on Nov. 17, immediately after the normal school had been completed and presented to the state board of public affairs, he withheld it until the submission of the budget was completed, in case any further data or information should be required of him, he said.

"I wish to feel free to advocate those educational policies that I believe in for the normal school system, for Milwaukee and for Wisconsin, without appearance of disloyalty to my employers and without suspicion of personal interest," Mr. Pearse also said in his letter to Mr. Van Auker.

"The work of the normal school system is of vital importance to the state. It will always have a large place in my interest," he continued. "I may be able, perhaps, upon occasion, as a private citizen, to give it some service, even more effectively than if I were a part of the system."

When the abolishment of courses in the normal schools was first proposed a storm of protest arose in art and educational circles here and pressure has already been brought to bear to have the board reconsider and continue the courses.

Resignation Expected

MADISON, Wis.—An acting president of the Milwaukee Normal school to succeed President Carroll G. Pearse, resigned, will probably be named at a meeting of the state board of normal school regents this month, William Kittle, secretary, announced Saturday.

Mr. Kittle said that the resignation of President Pearse had been expected by the board for some time, as it had been indirectly informed that he intended to enter the Washington office of the National Educational association.

Referring to statements made by Pearse that the activity of the Milwaukee Normal school had been restricted because of insufficient appropriations Mr. Kittle said that the board of normal regents had just recommended in its current budget, increases approximating nearly $175,000 for the Milwaukee school. This includes, he said, direct provision for additional class room space.

MAJESTIC OFFERING ON THANKSGIVING IS CLEVER FARCE

Those who crowded the Majestic theater on Thanksgiving and Friday to see "My Dardanella Girl" showed by wholehearted applause and repeated cheers that they enjoyed to the fullest the exceptionally fine program of music, dancing, song and comedy which it offered. This play, which Hal Kiter says is one of his best shows, was put on as a special treat for the holiday but was continued over the remainder of the week.

"My Dardanella Girl" is modeled on "Tyrannical and Galatea," but adapted to 1922. In it the players put over some good comedy and Josephus Jasper, single even brings in some fancy dancing which delights the audience. Pearl Stevens takes the part of Dardanella, the ancient Rapper, come to life.

When the three kiddies appeared in Hindu costume for "The Song of India," everyone leaned forward to see better. The youngsters followed their leader, Pearl Stevens, through three encores and still the audience clapped for more.

"The Beauty Parlor" is the Sunday bill of Hal Kiter's Musicals.

PLACE OF REFUGE

IN THE fear of the Lord is strong confidence, and His children shall have a place of refuge.—Proverbs 14: 26.

It's a Long Way

THE distresses of contemporary novelists and essayists, who find so much that is immature and vulgar in American life that it seems to make up the whole foreground, middle distance and background of their picture of the American scene, are probably the result of a carefully selected and nurtured attitude, if not indeed of a pose. Perhaps it is nothing more disgraceful than the natural zeal and exaggeration of the evangelist "crying in the wilderness," although sometimes it seems to bear evidence of a close relationship to the very sensational journalism and cheapness which these writers affect to deplore so superciliously. But no one outside of this coterie of new-school authors, and their friends and press-agents the new-school critics, can accept them as wholly honest. Of their honesty of intention there may be two minds and reserved judgment. Of their distortion of interpretation, their wilful blindness to all that does not fit the preconceived diagram of a decayed and blatant civilization, there can be no question. Every reader knows of items left out of the picture which challenge its veracity. Our "new school" of letters is chiefly propaganda, with the amazing force and equally amazing untruthfulness of all such endeavor.

The things that these authors find wrong with our folkways and civilization are usually as reported. The trouble with the impression is that the writers omit almost all of the redeeming traits of American manners and character. This is the sign manual of the zealot. It is not the method of the great master of letters. The truly great in literature have never needed to twist and suppress parts of their material to validate their points of view and philosophy. They did not work with a spotlight immovably focussed on a small area of their subject. They drew from the full illumination of the sun and dared to admit perspective and contrast, high light and shadow, into their masterpieces.

One most often wishes, in reading contemporary literature, that the writers could separate themselves from their prejudices long enough to stand back and get the proper relation between their times and the history of civilization. Modern America, the last twenty years of which seems so deplorable to their passion for correction, is but a momentary phase. Viewed in its proper place in the long aisles of history it hardly counts. Thus examined, the despair and anger of American uplifters seems petty, like a child's fury at a block-house that won't come right. It seems a long way back to the time of Alexander the Great, and in the foreshortening of time Alexander the Great and the dawn of civilization in Egypt, for instance, seem almost contemporary. Yet the civilization of the Pharaohs covered a period up to the time of Alexander much longer than all the time between Alexander and today. We speak of Ancient Rome and Greece, yet in the march of civilization they were late arrivals. Egypt, Greece, Rome, began in crudity and materialistic strivings, and in some thousands of years grew to a knowledge and appreciation of the arts of civilization. Civilization in America, in North America, has not yet seen 500 years. We are still settling and developing the country, still in the materialistic stage of our development. Indeed, the considerable appreciation of the arts, the considerable refinement and fineness that has already laid hold of American life, thin as it may be considered absolutely, nevertheless constitutes a speed record for civilization. It will be centuries yet, perhaps, before America has evolved a homogeneous people and worthy culture of its own, but we know of no instance in history where there was such a fruitful and hopeful beginning so early in point of time.

Striving to better the world and improve the lot of one's fellows is without doubt a virtue. But so is patience, and understanding. One would not have American authors contented and satisfied with the world as it stands, for we need to be spurred to progress. But ill-temper doesn't help, nor contempt. It is true that we have a long way to travel, but there is plenty of time to do it. What we need is less cracking of the whip, less abuse from our self-appointed teamsters, and a little more real help with the load. If they will spare a little time from their gymnastics to look up and down the road we are traveling they will see that it is a steep climb, and that we have on the whole covered a considerable distance even if it is still some way from the top of the hill and the broader outlook that there awaits us.

Gets Results

RUBBER heels now are on 60 out of each 100 pairs of shoes worn by men. Such is the estimate going the rounds in the shoe industry. It is not surprising, if you have noticed how many men wear rubber heels. But maybe you remember back only a few years when rubber heels were unusual. What brought them into popularity? The answer is—Advertising.

Three-fourths of the rubber heels sold are for men's shoes. This is because most of the advertising has been directed at men. One of these days some wise manufacturer of rubber heels will notice this. Then he'll call in the advertising man and his staff of writers and artists. Campaigns will follow. And soon women will be wearing just as many rubber heels as men. It's all a matter of advertising—the most powerful force in the sale of goods. The ideal combination is advertising, which reaches consumers' brains through their eyes, and personal salesmanship which reaches less vividly through the ears.

Our present standard of living is largely the creation of advertising. For advertising creates the demand, makes people want the thing advertised. When the lure becomes powerful enough, they hustle about and get the money to obtain what they want. Advertising thus spurs sales. It also stimulates production—both of the things advertised and the things that have to be done on a bigger scale to obtain money for purchasing advertised wares.

There is a new thought for you—that advertising is a definite agency of production. Most of us have been thinking of it merely as a medium of salesmanship.

Advertising is what is making us buy.

Advertising is what is enabling us to buy.

It creates the demand. And the demand induces us to work harder to get the money to spend. If all advertising were abruptly discontinued, the American standard of living would quickly drop to the levels of grandpa's day. Read the ads. They are a part of the news, telling the intimate story of the average American's inner desires. The real history of civilization is written in ads.

Penalty

A SMALL steamship corporation on the Great Lakes owns three freighters. In one month these boats are idle long enough to cost the owners $43,000 in overhead charges. The idleness was compulsory, due to railroad car shortage. The boats were unable to get cars to haul away their cargo. No matter what business problem you study, you soon find it connecting with the greatest of national economic problems, transportation.

In Ye Olden Times

TEN YEARS AGO TODAY

Dr. I. N. Cohen, for many years a well known physician of this city, died of peritonitis at his home, 429 South Fifth street, at seven o'clock last evening. Dr. Cohen was born in Göttingen, Germany, in 1850. He came to La Crosse in 1892 and has lived here ever since. He has been a physician since 1872.

Walter Eckersall, former All-American quarterback, placed fire of the University of Wisconsin football players, on the All-Western eleven. Among those named is Tubby Keeler of La Crosse, former star of the local high school team, who is picked for one of the guard positions. Eckersall says that Keeler's playing has been of great assistance to the Badgers in winning the western title.

Henry J. Hoelzer was elected president of the La Crosse Printers' union at the monthly meeting of the local held in Eagles' hall on Jay street last night. The other officers elected were: Fred Sling, vice president; Michael Roubik, recording secretary; Herman Richter, secretary-treasurer and Ed. Schilling, sergeant-at-arms.

Mr. and Mrs. Albert Major celebrated their silver wedding anniversary yesterday by entertaining forty of their friends at a six o'clock dinner.

TWENTY YEARS AGO TODAY

Sheriff-elect Henry Lueh yesterday appointed Chris J. Burns, the well-known and popular captain of the baseball association, to the position of deputy sheriff during his term of office. He also appointed his son, Milton Lueh, turnkey at the jail. Mr. Burns will continue in the fruit business until January first, when he will assume his new duties.

Floyd Green of this city has been appointed to represent the local railroad men at the conference of the Brotherhood of Railroad Firemen and railroad officials which is to be held in Chicago next week.

Manager Goodrich of the La Crosse Telephone company will attend the Inter-State Independent Telephone Association's convention in Chicago December 3-11.

Farmers are having trouble getting their products to market on account of the heavy snow and as a result trading at the market is light.

THIRTY YEARS AGO TODAY

The dedicatory exercises of the new Catholic church of St. Nicholas in North Park will take place tomorrow afternoon. Rev. Paul Geyer is pastor of the church.

Miss Anna Fremstad of La Crosse and Mr. Henry Ruppung of Cashton, were united in marriage yesterday by Rev. A. K. Sagen.

Teams passed over the new bridge to West La Crosse for the first time today.

B. A. Siggins will open a new branch store in Forestad's new building on Caledonia street, before the holidays.

Rev. S. W. Moran of West Salem who has had charge of the Episcopal churches there and at Mauston for the past two years, has been transferred to the Onalaska and north side parishes.

Any Old Port

By A. W. PEACH
Stafford gazed around the room with a whimsical grin. It was a top-floor, sky-light room. The bed groaned and the whole room gave evidence that it was a last shelter. He looked up through the sky-light. "Any way, I am getting nearer the Angels all the time," he advised himself.

He arranged a few belongings that he took from his pocket and placed on the small size battered bureau. As he did this, he noticed in the top-drawer some torn pieces of paper. "Somebody's last will and testament," he muttered to himself. "I wonder what poor soul came to anchor in this last harbor."

He arranged the pieces until the story was plain to him and he whistled softly as he worked. Three attempts had been made to write a letter to some one called "Dear." Each had been thrown aside, the third and complete one evidently because of a blot. The last he could read, it began—

"Dear—I am all discouraged. My hospital bill took all my savings. I'm so weak. Have the not was illegible."

"Come to me, just for the old love you had for me. Cheer me a little; you are the only one who can. If you don't I'm afraid it is the end."

Stafford stared at the trembling girl's hand, his smile vanishing, and read on. She asked her one-time lover to meet her in the city station. She would be in one of the first three seats—if there was room.

The German of whom he had just hired the room had told him that the roomer had just left, and Stafford reasoned that in her condition she would leave for one purpose—the one indicated in her note.

He drew his last half-dollar from his pocket and inspected the coin. "How can I rescue a maiden in distress with this?" he asked himself—and did not pause for reply.

In a few minutes he was heading for a great central station, braving the cold winds that hummed by every worn thread of his old suit. Patiently he trudged soon brought him in sight of the huge pile, and a minute later found him studying the long central seats. His quick eye saw a slight form then a thin, wistful face, from which abnormally dark and sad eyes looked out with inner dread. In the girl's hand was a yellow slip of paper.

He went up to her with decisive stride. "Miss Hope Hartwell? My name is Lane Stafford. Has the knight arrived?" He held out her blotted note.

"The stard at him; then at the note," he said. "I saw it when she passed the pension in her face—probably the inner light of good cheer and frank manhood in his eyes; little lights that would burn while life lasted."

She held out the yellow slip. "He sent a messenger. He isn't coming," she said quietly.

"That suits me," he said cheerfully. "That is my last half dollar. Let's spend it like millionaires. It's lunch time, you know. I know a warm and cozy place where for four bits, you can get—"

"The girl looked at him wonderingly, and he became sober. He did not intend that this dark-eyed bit of city beauty should drift from his life. "Remember," he announced, "and we both better get in."

The air was infectious. She rose and started with him, worrying him as she did so with her revealed weakness.

They feared to the full extent of the half dollar. He exerted himself to amuse her, and was satisfied with the shy amusement in her eyes. After the feast he announced:

"Now, it is set sail for 'Sauerkraut's' abode, where you shall have my room—"

"But—"

"But—you shall! Come, lass, the tide has been ebbed, but it's coming in, believe me!"

It was evident she had never met a specimen like him—one of the chosen ones that life seems never able to overtake, and he guessed, too, that she knew her need of him.

Old "Sauerkraut's" long ago hardened to the ways of the strange world that drifted in and out of his cheap place, nodded briefly when he heard the arrangement. He had his work's rent—why worry?

Pledging her not to run away, he waved her a gay adieu and headed out into the night to become one of the sleepers in a long hall where by virtue of a bath and evident poverty a man might sleep for one night only. He planned and then he slept, dreamlessly.

The next day he hunted for work, but his right hand, right hand barrel him from several places. He managed to get enough change together to give himself and Hope two fair meals on two days. At the close of the last she looked at him with eyes that were still amused and more—tender with a soft glow in their dark depths.

"How do you keep so cheerful?" she asked.

"Lass, I don't know, unless—nobody can get my goat—not even life!"

The evening of the third day he hurried her to their ally restaurant. His eyes were sparkling. "Listen, my lady, I broke into an office today and found I had hit the father of one of my buddies overseas who went West—and he told me he could give me some work about his place. I'll take charge of his estate. I'll be a millionaire. I told him I was."

"Her eyes were faint and breathless. 'You—you are!'"

"No, I'm not. I was thinking of the future. I am going to be. I'm going to marry you!"

"You—you—"

He misunderstood. "That is if you can stand a chap with a crippled hand around all—"

She caught the crippled hand, suddenly bent her dark head and wept. He felt her cheek wet upon the broken hand that was his memory of the Argentine. Then he bent unconsciously of the world about him and kissed the tangle of her neck.

"Down goes the anchor, honey, let the winds blow. We're reached port!" he announced.

What Clemenceau's Visit Will Do

BY FRANK H. SIMONDS

WASHINGTON.—In all the American aspect of the Clemenceau incident there is nothing which is more striking than the fact that the former prime minister is here being attacked as guilty of sins of commission, where in France he suffers for sins of omission. Had Clemenceau been the militarist he is now taxed with being, instead of being a lone figure in French politics, he would be president of the republic.

A certain pathos there is, for those who recall the actual occurrences of Paris, in the present plight of the Tiger. His visit to the United States, his mission here, is beyond all else the outcome of what is regarded in France as his capital offense. When American senators accuse him either of militarism or of imperialism, they strangely quarrel not merely with the history of the statesman before the war but even more with his record in the peace negotiations.

When the fighting was over and the Paris conference had convened Clemenceau, with all the enormous prestige which came to him of right as the general who had won the battle, served upon Clemenceau notice that it was the settled judgment of the French army that France could only be protected against a new German invasion, if the military frontier of France were fixed at the Rhine.

This was the French thesis; this was the view Clemenceau presented to Mr. Wilson and Lloyd George. Of course this view was at once opposed by both, and Clemenceau found himself faced with the choice between breaking with the representatives of Britain and the United States and quarreling with Foch and with the mass of the French nation. A quarrel with Foch on this issue meant defeat and elimination.

It was clear to Mr. Wilson and to Lloyd George that Clemenceau could only resist the pressure from Foch, if he were able to present his country with some guarantee of security which was equal in their minds to the possession of the left bank of the Rhine. It is essential to recognize, however, that it was security, not annexation that interested Foch. Clemenceau was able to face his opponents only by virtue of the agreement of Mr. Wilson and Lloyd George to the treaty of guarantee. Nor should one forget that even this pledge, while it was still regarded as valid, failed to satisfy the great marshal.

It was the deliberate decision of Clemenceau to renounce the left bank of the Rhine and accept the Anglo-American guarantee which made possible a treaty of Versailles which did not in reality dismember Germany. But when the United States rejected the whole Wilson peace, with the treaty of guarantee included, and the British refused to give their assurance without the American, the treaty of Versailles became for most Frenchmen a bitter disappointment and Clemenceau was refused the presidency and became the most unpopular man in his country. Clemenceau defended himself, before America retired from the situation, by the obvious declaration that Anglo-American assurances and friendship were vastly more valuable to France than the possession of a frontier, which, strong from a military sense, still insured no permanent peace but inevitable war, whenever Germany felt strong enough to attack again.

Now, when Clemenceau comes to America to plead for American return to Europe, he comes as a man who, by listening to American and British arguments and by accepting pledges made by an American president and a British prime minister, earned the bitterest sort of denunciation by his fellow countrymen. The French do not as a rule say that America betrayed France or that Mr. Wilson knowingly deceived Clemenceau; they do say that Clemenceau made a huge and costly mistake, a fatal blunder in not taking the advice of Foch. But after all that is only an oblique way of saying that Clemenceau was duped and France victimized.

If Clemenceau had believed for a moment that America would not honor Mr. Wilson's signature, he would have insisted upon permanent possession of the left bank of the Rhine. It is idle to discuss whether he should have known better or not, the actual fact is that he believed Mr. Wilson, that he staked his own political career and the security of his country upon his confidence in Mr. Wilson's promise of an American guarantee.

When events proved his judgment wrong, his career was ended, he came for France the man who had won the victory on the battle field and lost it around the green table. Of course Clemenceau has never been a militarist; he fought the empire as did his father before him and was an exile as a result. He was one of the handful of gallant men who fought the Dreyfus affair through to an honest solution in the teeth of every military influence in his country. No accusation is more frequently leveled against him than that he was one of those responsible for the fact that the French army was not ready at the moment the Germans had attacked.

All his life Clemenceau has been fighting precisely the ideas which we call reactionary and the spirit which we describe as imperialistic. There is no Frenchman in public life today and there was none in 1919, when the Paris conference met, who would have shown himself as moderate, as reasonable, as devoid of chauvinistic ideas as Clemenceau. His consuming passion at Paris was security for his country, not expansion, and he sought that security, not in strategic frontiers, but in international friendship. There is no use in reviewing the career of the French statesman to prove that he has always been antimilitarist, but it may be worth recalling that he was turned out of office when prime minister before the war because of his violent attack upon Deleassé, whose policies he regarded as provocative and leading to a Franco-German war.

Whatever else one may say or think about the Clemenceau mission, it is a cruel injustice to tax him with being either a militarist or a chauvinist, just as it is a gross blunder to tax him with being a reactionary. He listened to the reasoning of the representatives of the Anglo-Saxon countries, he accepted their assurances, he did this in the face of the most violent protests within his own country. In doing this he saved Germany from partition, made possible a settlement at Paris which was moderate by contrast with what would have resulted in any other case.

The result was the American rejection of Wilson, the collapse of the guarantee in Britain and France and now, the moral certainty that the French will continue to occupy the left bank of the Rhine for an indefinite future. Always the Anglo-American guarantee of French security was the only alternative and no other living Frenchman would have dared to take it. Only American adoption of that pledge could rehabilitate Clemenceau, not in French politics, he does not care for that, not even in history, for that leaves him cynical, but in his own mind, for he is a Frenchman and as a Frenchman must believe that he injured his country gravely, if he exchanged a solid military bulwark for assurances which turned out to be vain.

He has believed, like so many other Frenchmen, that the reason America left Europe and rejected the pledges made by Mr. Wilson was that Americans did not understand the facts. He has come over to explain them still confident that the explanation will dissipate the doubts and bring America back. If he fails, he will be naked before his foes, he will have no answer to their indictments. The single useful purpose his visit will have accomplished is to establish once for all in the French mind that Foch was right and that the French army must stay on the Rhine.

In a word, it seems to me beyond question that Clemenceau's failure here, which in the larger sense seems inevitable, will silence the last moderate voice in France and bring about a real revision of the treaty of Versailles, which will make the Rhine the military frontier of France. BLAINE IN REPLY TO HOAN ATTACK ON TAX PROGRAM

Governor Declares Time is Ripe for Radical Changes in Taxation Methods

MADISON, Wis.—By the Associated Press.—The time has come in Wisconsin when there must be an entire change in the character of taxation to raise funds for highway construction and maintenance. Governor J. J. Blaine, today Mayor Daniel W. Hoan of Milwaukee, Friday in a reply to the Milwaukee executive's recent attack on the financial program sponsored by the legislative committee of the county boards' association.

While refraining from a definite expression of attitude toward the county board proposals, which include a gasoline tax, a two percent highway privilege tax on automobile valuation, and a graduated license fee based on weight of vehicles, Governor Blaine said that there must be a new system of raising money for highway purposes, and the adoption of any provincial system of highway tax will not meet with my approval. He expressed the opinion that those who use the highways most should bear more of their costs.

"The entire character of highways has been changed and yet the method of taxation for those highways has scarcely changed. In the era of tax and home drawn vehicles there was some relationship between the use of the highway and the source of the money to lay out and build highways. In those days those who used the highways most, paid almost the entire cost."

"My position is that on account of the change in the character of highways and their use there must come a change in the character of taxation for highways and the adoption of any provincial system of highway tax will not meet with my approval."

WINTER QUARTERS OF MOONSHINERS BROKEN UP BY STATE AGENTS

MADISON, Wis.—The cave of Al Baha and his forty thieves has a Wisconsin rival.

State prohibition agents this week raided the winter quarters of moonshiners in a comfortable moonshine operation of Mike Chary and Jim O'Nab of Rhineland when they raided their cave in the woods near the northern city.

The cave had been nicely boarded up with pine floor, ceiling and walls. Lamps were on the walls and living quarters were comparable to some city homes but the rear of the cave disclosed a nice still, three barrels of moonshine, ten gallons of moonshine, a still with a gasoline stove that made no smoke to disclose its presence and other utensils of the trade.

QUICK WIT OF PHONE OPERATOR PREVENTS ASHLAND BURGLARY

ASHLAND, Wis.—Miss Lauretta Lutz, quick-witted telephone operator for the Wisconsin Telephone company, saved the wholesale fruit house of George Egan from being robbed Wednesday night.

About half past midnight Miss Lutz saw the light denoting the Egan Fruit company's door open. She rushed to the door and found no person, although she could hear noises. Thinking that something might be wrong, she called Egan's house and was told that at that time of night, she called Mr. Egan at his home. He went directly to the office and found the warehouse and were preparing to carry off supplies. He turned them over to the police.

Miss Lutz was rewarded by the Egan company.

MILLIONAIRE RED MODIFIES VIEWS UPON GOVERNMENT

CHICAGO, Ill.—By The Associated Press.—William Brock Lloyd, millionaire communist, released Wednesday night from a prison sentence of from one to five years, has renounced his views in government and present opposition by a "peaceful peasant proprietorship" in his North Shore home, he announced Friday.

Lloyd, convicted with fifteen other communists under the state anti-subversive act, and sentenced by Governor Smith, denied that he had changed his views.

"I still believe and I still have faith," he said, "the American people are not yet ripe for a drastic change in government, but it may come in five years or a hundred. It's a matter of evolution and experience."

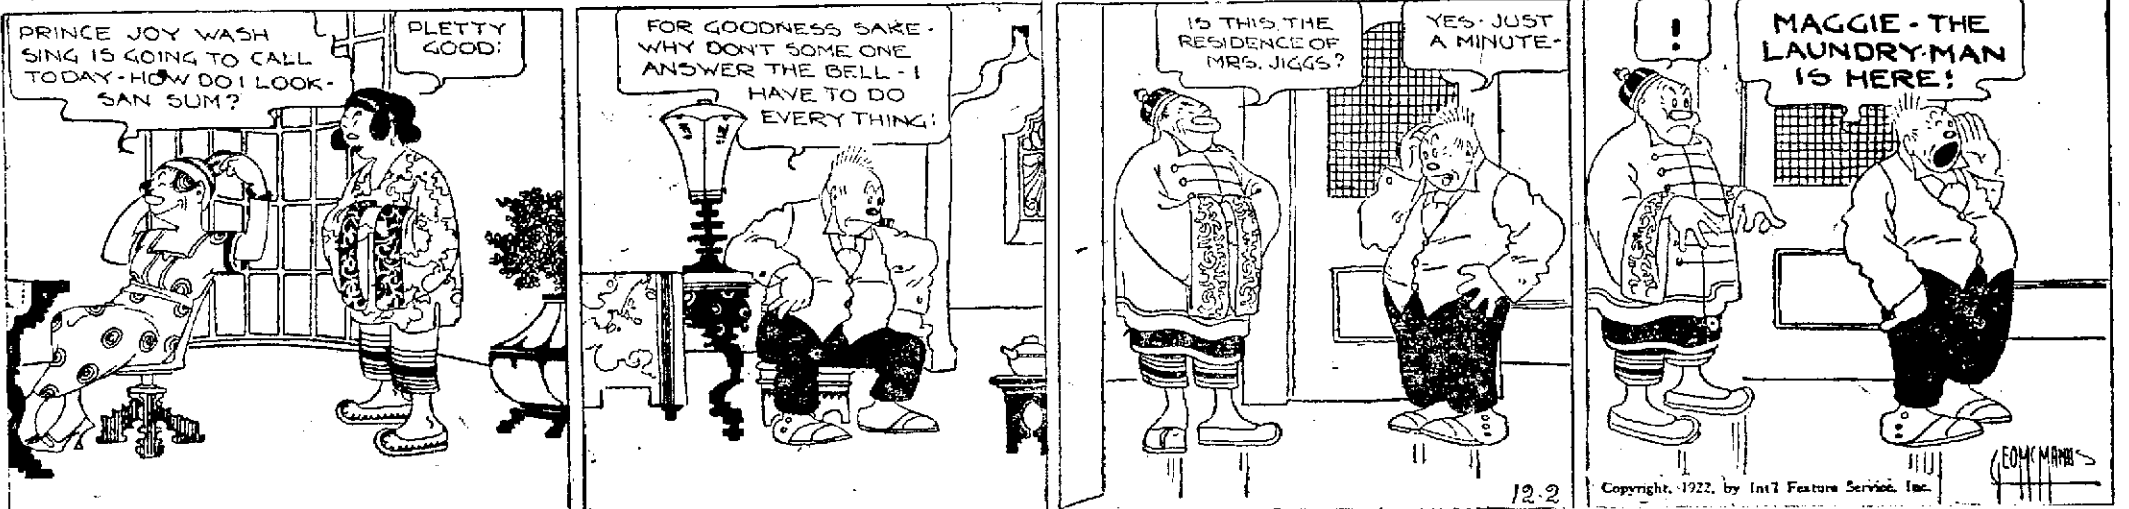

FOUR AUTOISTS INJURED
APPLETON, Wis.—Four people are confined to a hospital here following the wrecking of their closed automobile Thursday night when it was struck by a Chicago and Northwestern passenger train of the Ashland division on a grade crossing near the Appleton depot. All had cuts and bruises about the body, but will be able to leave the hospital in a day or two. They were thrown clear of the automobile, which was dragged beneath the baggage car for thirty feet.

BLAINE URGES REPEAL OF INCOME TAX SECRECY CLAUSE AT PROGRESSIVE CONFERENCE

WASHINGTON, D. C.—By The Associated Press.—Repeal of the secrecy clause in both federal and state income tax laws was urged by Governor J. J. Blaine, speaking before the Progressive conference here Saturday, as one effective way of making wealth bear its just burden of taxation, which he said, it is now escaping.

Quoting Andrew Mellon, secretary of the treasury, as saying that the government is unable to collect taxes due it from incomes and surtaxes on excess profits, the Wisconsin governor asserted that what Mr. Mellon meant was that "the profiteers and millionaires escape income and surtaxes by making false returns, sometimes through innocence, perchance, but often through fraud and deceit or by legal devices and tricks of the trade."

Governor Blaine characterized the men and corporations failing to pay the whole of their income taxes as tax dodgers who are undermining government by their activity. He asked that the income tax secrecy clause be removed so that the names of the tax dodgers might be made public.

"We hear much eloquence about law and order and the enforcement of law," the governor said, "Spidum, however, does such eloquence ever relate to the millionaire tax dodger—the man or the corporation that appropriates to himself or itself money that belongs to the government. We hear it thundered from public officials and platforms that law must be enforced. It is just as important to command respect for the law affecting taxation as it is to command respect for any other law."

AUTO ACCIDENTS IN MILWAUKEE TAKE 8 LIVES WITHIN WEEK

MILWAUKEE, Wis.—Two men were killed by automobiles Thursday night and nearly a score were injured. Eight persons have been killed in automobile accidents in the last week. Nearly every death has been caused by reckless or careless driving.

"The toll of deaths last week is appalling," Chief of Police Lapham said Friday. "We will send these reckless drivers to prison and put everyone who drives while drunk or in a foolish manner in jail if we possibly can. These killings must stop."

Three men are held as a result of Thursday's accidents. Two of them were injured when a car in which they were riding, overturned after knocking down four pedestrians and striking two other automobiles.

IOWA MAY PLACE ON BADGER LIST FOR NEXT SEASON

Current Reports Have it that Illinois May be Dropped from Badger Schedule

CARDINALS ALSO EXPECTED TO RESUME WITH OHIO STATE

Gophers May Take Badgers
Place on Illini Card

CHICAGO, Ill.—The bitter feeling between Wisconsin and Illinois which boiled up previous to the Badger-Illini football game, was apparent on Friday as coaches and other representatives of western conference universities met for their annual university meeting.

Reports were current that Illinois may be dropped from the Wisconsin schedule and Iowa substituted. Conference members were also under way in an effort to resume the annual Ohio-Wisconsin game, dropped after a split between the two universities a year ago. It was reported that Iowa already had accepted a home and home series with Wisconsin.

Maroons to Meet Tigers

Another home and home series between Chicago and Princeton was regarded as a certainty and the Maroons planned to leave an open date for negotiations with the tigers. Chicago was also thinking of dropping Northwestern and playing Minnesota. The Maroons still showed no tendency to take on the champion Iowa eleven, although Coach Jones was demanding a game with Chicago and Michigan.

Michigan's schedule is expected to include Ohio, Wisconsin, Minnesota and Illinois, with Indiana, Purdue and Northwestern mentioned for the future. There was some talk of a Chicago-Michigan game, but the Wolverine was looking for a week term with the four big eight, certain.

Gophers on Card

Black and Ohio State probably will have the same schedule, with Minnesota being substituted on the Illinois card for Wisconsin, Purdue and Indiana apparently will have no new games.

The athletic directors of the Big Ten schools met in secret conference Friday afternoon and finally adjourned with a meeting Friday night. The schedule will be adopted at a meeting on Saturday.

HUNTER LOST IN WOODS FOR WEEK MAY NOT RECOVER

RHINELANDER, Wis.—After having been lost for nearly a week in the dense timber near State Line, Edward Collins, 35, a woodman, has been found by a party of hunters.

Collins was in a serious condition from exposure and lack of food. His hands and feet were frozen and he was delirious. He was brought to a hospital here, where he is said to have slight chances for recovery.

Collins left the camp where he was employed to hunt. He had no matches or compass and entering an unfamiliar part of the woods lost his way. He wandered about aimlessly and in order to attract attention fired at his ammunition. When his cartridges were gone he threw his rifle away. He spent two days and two nights in an old logging shanty and there found some barrels which he wrapped around his frozen feet. When found by the hunters he was scarcely able to walk.

PHOTOS PROJECTED BY LONG DISTANCE WIRES IN PARIS

PARIS.—Tele-vision, or "long distance sight" by wireless, was given a preliminary experimental demonstration at the Satorne Friday by Edouard Belin, inventor of transmission of photographs by wire. Flashes of light were directed on a selenium element which through another instrument produced sound waves. These waves were then taken up by a wireless apparatus that reproduced the flashes of light on a mirror.

This was offered as proof that the general principle of projecting a stationary scene had been solved.

NATIONAL GAUGE JUMPS INTO SECOND PLACE ON FRIDAY

Winners of three games from the LaCrosse club 60's, the National Gauge bowlers Friday night leaped ahead of the Triple Seals and Arenz Shoes to second place in the city league percentage column. Mekvold's consistent rolling was a factor in the victory, and he himself made high three game total.

Leading two out of three to the Shrine company helped the Triple Seals slide.

The Montagues still held the top position with two out of three from the Maders. The Krauses' and Gibsons won two out of three from the Rivoli and Bodega.

COACH CARSON IN PRAISE TO LOCALS FOR TREATMENT ACCORDED WHILE IN CITY

SUPERIOR, Wis.—Superior Central high school's team alighted from a "Soo" Line train Friday night one step nearer the state championship, after defeating the LaCrosse high team Thursday, 14 to 12. They were met at the depot by the Rotary club band and about 2,000 Superior fans. The team is now ready to meet the winner of the Marinette-West Allis game, according to a statement today by Coach Fred Carson. Outside of a few minor bruises the team appeared to be in wonderful shape until the crowd descended upon them with boisterous congratulations. "More casualties from that than from the game," remarked one of the members of the team.

"We are naturally highly elated at winning," said Coach Carson, "and I want to say that we received wonderful treatment. It was a hard game played under miserable conditions, but it was the same for both teams. The game was remarkably free from dirty playing, and the officiating was of a high order."

NEBRASKA LEADS MISSOURI VALLEY CONFERENCE TEAMS

Defeat of Notre Dame Added
Much to Cornhuskers'

Gridiron Glory

KANSAS CITY, Mo.—By The Associated Press.—The Nebraska Cornhuskers stood on the football horizon today not only as the undisputed champions of the Missouri valley conference, but as one of the strongest elevens in the middle west. Defeat of the much touted Notre Dame at Lincoln yesterday added much to the gridiron glory of the Nebraskaans.

Nebraska played five games in the conference, winning all by wide margins. The victims were Missouri, Kansas, Oklahoma, Kansas Aggies and Ames.

Drake also played an ever victorious season in the valley. But the Des Moines Bull Dogs were not scheduled to meet as many strong elevens in the conference as were the Cornhuskers. Nebraska, using largely a second string eleven, overwhelmed Ames 54 to 0. Drake had defeated Ames 14 to 7. The final standing:

MORE THAN 600 HIGH SCHOOL EDITORS AT MADISON MEETING

MADISON, Wis.—High school editors here for the third annual convention of the Central Inter-Scholastic Press association opened the concluding day of their meeting Saturday with business sessions for consideration of their publication problems. Awards are to be made this afternoon to the best high school papers.

With over six hundred delegates in attendance, the convention spent its first day listening to the editors' and advertising men's group meetings and were held for each division of publication work.

Walter P. McGuire, editor of the American Boy, addressing the meeting urged that the high school editors use their influence to direct school politics and to correct wrongs and foster commendable projects of the school. The school paper, he said, when properly directed can control the thought of the school.

Miss Elizabeth K. Adams, head of the National Girl Scouts, in her talk urged co-education not only for the classroom but also in the activities of the schools.

Prof. E. Marion Johnson, of the University of Wisconsin, Prof. W. R. Krieser, of the South Dakota State College and Prof. H. H. Hargrove, of the McGill School of Journalism, will talk to the delegates today.

LAST OF ESCAPED MICHIGAN CONVICTS CAPTURED FRIDAY

MARQUETTE, Mich.—The long arm of the law again asserted its supremacy over the individual efforts of the few who attempt to escape life's grasp when Eddie Weisman and Philip Salanardi, the last of a total of fifteen prisoners who escaped from the Marquette branch of the Michigan state prison here Sunday afternoon, were captured by Warden James Corzan and his deputies. The two convicts clearly showed the effects of their week of hiding, both being hungry, cold and weak.

Salanardi, Wayne county life, was the first to be captured. He was apprehended at 11:30 Friday morning by a Big River deputy near Rapid River. Weisman was captured shortly afterwards a short distance from where his companion had been found and surrendered without any resistance being made and unarmed.

The capture of Salanardi and Weisman terminated one of the most successful "man hunts" ever conducted by the law of the Upper Peninsula. Practically every square mile of ground in the northern Michigan peninsula and northern Wisconsin was under constant surveillance by state police, sheriffs and constables, who were on watch on all the highways leading out of Marquette.

After their escape, Weisman and Salanardi broke open a vault in Marquette cemetery and slept for two nights alongside of a coffin. The men were taken back to Marquette from Rapid River by Warden Corzan Friday afternoon. No shots were fired in the capture of the men.

Man will soon be a Christian nation, and it is our hope that America will open our doors to Christianity now as he did to material reconstruction 70 years ago.

Can Make Japan

"What can Christianity do for Japan," asked Mr. Sato in closing. "It is an made for Japan peace, harmony and prosperity that will last forever."

E. M. McClelland, secretary of the Y. M. C. A. in Madras, India, in a short address appealed for the aid of America in helping the youth of India to find themselves. "Hinduism and Mohammedanism cannot stand the strain of democracy," he said, "and the people of that land are looking to Christianity as the only way out. There is a great opportunity left in India for the Y. M. C. A. to do a splendid work with the boys, and I hope that soon we will see a representative from this state at work there."

Most of the time at the morning session was occupied with the five minute talks by delegates on the problems which confront boys in different walks of life. These discussions were very interesting, and several great problems were brought out. The discussions were led by E. W. Strandberg of Chicago. The devotional period was led by Lawrence Aulin of Milwaukee, Lowell Poutsch, conference president, presided at the session.

What he thinks the real minister must be.

M. stands for many, which means that many need his service. Foreign countries in particular need the help of the American missionary and teacher of Christianity. Incidentally, there are 50,000,000 non-Christians in the United States, who are a menace to the country, for they have no light beyond the trucks and trades of everyday life which does not make the country a strong united power morally.

I stands for I. Am I willing to take my place and do what I can? This sounds unimportant to some people, but it is necessary that each one conquers himself, his own decision, before trying to lead others.

N. stands for Now. Now is the time—the day of salvation. Now is the time to make the decision as to which path you are going to take.

I stands for Increase. Increase in strength, not only physically and intellectually, but spiritually.

S. stands for service. Serve better than your neighbor. Rev. Bieber praised Henry Ford as a server.

T. stands for Thanksgiving. Our thanks to God are not in order only on Thanksgiving day but every day of our lives we have something for which we can thank God. Be an optimist. Smile in the face of unpleasant circumstances.

R. stands for righteousness, a very important quality of a perfect minister.

Y. stands for You. You are developing yourself in order that you may be of service to them. You must sacrifice yourself "for their sakes."

Following the address by Rev. Bieber, several delegates gave short prayers, and the first session of the 20th annual Older Boys' conference closed with a song by the delegates.

At 6 o'clock group dinners were held at the First M. E. Baptist church and at the Y. M. C. A. at which the old fellowship cultivated at the Phantom Lake and Manitowish Hiv camps were renewed and a pleasant half hour of discussion took place. Delegates representing churches and Sunday schools met in discussion at the First M. E. church.

Evening Session

The evening session of the Older Boys' conference was held at the Congregational church. The meeting was called to order at 7:30 o'clock, and was opened by the singing of songs and a prayer for the town, represented by the delegates. A splendid musical selection was rendered by the Normanna Sangerker, with E. O. Forseth as director. An encore, Mr. Forseth sang a solo accompanied by the rest of the group who furnished a background for his voice by humming. These men were very entertaining.

A short devotional service was held, followed by a speech by E. H. Gibson. "Gibbie" proved himself as capable and interesting a speaker as he is a backstop on the University of Wisconsin football team. His talk involved football whereby he showed the character qualities of a good football player and the absolute necessity of good, clean sportsmanship, in order to keep this game from being dragged down and actually excluded from college and high school athletics.

Gibbie called attention to the code of the football player, which can be found at the beginning of the football rule book. This code calls for good, spirited football, and should be lived up to by every football player.

Decries Professionalism

One of the greatest sins of football is professionalism, which has hit several of the Big Ten conference teams and also other school teams. The boys can not be altogether to blame for accepting the large sums of money sometimes offered by the professional promoters of the game. It is chiefly the fault of the "vultures" as they are called, who entice the good college players to accept money or some other kind of reward for playing on their professional teams. But it is almost impossible to stop the vulture. The struggle remains with the boys themselves.

Gibbie pointed out to his audience the reasons why professional football or any kind of game is not desired, when he said, "Professional football is played with absolutely the wrong spirit. There is no loyalty, no cohesion, no sportsmanship in it. The professional player adheres only to money. He does not fight for the honor of winning the game. Even the high school players now expect a shining medal, a large loving cup, or some such valuable distinction for winning a contest. Unless he receives a reward, he will not participate in an athletic event. In the olden days, when the Romans met for athletic contests, the winner was rewarded with a mere leaf or wreath by some fair lady. He did not have the idea of winning for a material reward. His own satisfaction of being a better athlete than his neighbor was plenty reward for him."

"It is up to you boys, who are the leaders of your communities to see that professionalism is put down. Are you going to stand by and see these vultures and promoters down clean football?"

The second point brought out by Gibbie was in regard to gambling, or betting on a game. This is also running football down to a basis of un-sportsmanship. Gambling can be prevented by the influence of these boy leaders.

The third point of his speech concerned the process of "procuring," employed by college coaches, some of them, and alumni of the different schools, who upon discovering a clever football player, make some arrangement financially, either by paying his expenses or by paying him a lump sum, in order that he should be in the school in which they are connected in order that that school may have a good team. This also involves professionalism, and is one of the greatest sins that can be committed by a boy who has the ability to play football very successfully.

"There is one school that I know of which has never been and shall never be guilty of procuring as long as Big John Richards is there, and that is the Wisconsin university," said Gibbie, who happens to be very well informed on the matter. A high school graduate who was a good football player, recently wrote a letter to Coach Richards asking if it would be possible for him to be "procured." In reply, the Wisconsin coach wrote back, "We shall be very glad to have you a member of our institution and hope you are able to attend Wisconsin, and in order that you may have enough money to stay at this university, we will furnish you with a pick and shovel and give you half you earn."

The candidate has not been heard of since, and Coach Richards hopes he spread the word along to other high school protégés. There are two ways to remedy procuring as far as Gibbie can see: one is through the influence of the Older Boys upon the boys in their towns, and the other is through the coaches and officials of the game. Any coach or official guilty of procuring has no right to his position and can be considered as an adept to clean sports.

In closing, Gibbie summed up his advice points to compare football with life in every respect. Both involve personality, co-operation, good sportsmanship, and so forth, way down the line of good qualities. He recalled the old adage, "Life is just what you make it," and concluded by saying, "Let's make it the best, fellows."

Dr. Beale Talks

The next speaker on the program was Dr. C. H. Beale, pastor of the Grand Avenue Congregational church of Milwaukee, who gave one of the most wonderful addresses heard at a conference in the last few years. It was evident that every Older Boy present left the church that evening with an inspiration to go forth and live purer, cleaner, and more serviceable lives.

Dr. Beale opened his address by seconding the main point brought out by Mr. Gibson. He called it a real sermon—a very practical and appealing talk of human character.

Dr. Beale then introduced his topic by saying that he would speak of the three views of life. "But first, I must tell you what success in life is. We must set a standard, a goal, towards which our energy may be expended," he said. "When we have reached that goal we have reached success. Most people set no goal and when they fail they ask themselves, 'Has my life been a success?' No. But why? Simply because there was no approach to success. There was no real goal to approach."

He then told a short story which emphasized his point. The story was to this effect: A dog was locked in a box which rested on the floor of a baggage room. The baggage agent did not know where the dog was to be sent. He asked the boss what to do about it. "Neither I nor the dog know where he is to go," said the agent. "Why don't you know?" asked his boss. "Because the dog ate his tag," replied the agent. Naturally, the dog could not be sent anywhere, because there was no goal for him to reach. In the same way, if we do not have a goal, we can not expect to get anywhere. This idea of knowing where you are going, what you are going to do in life is what is called the philosophy of life. And so Dr. Beale set before us his subject the "Philosophy of Life."

Two Views of Life

"In the days when Athens was in full bloom, two men were standing in conversation with each other. Soon a poorly dressed, pale-looking Jew approached the two men and listened to their conversation. They were talking about life. One of the men was an epicurean. He had the idea of life that most of us have today. He believed in enjoyment. 'Eat, drink and have all the fun you can. Life is short, and we might as well enjoy it as much as we can.' The second man was a believer of stoicism. He looked over life and his thoughts were gloomy at the prospects. 'It is a hard, cruel world. Life is rather dark. What shall man do? Let him endure and be strong. Let him possess a stronger moral courage than physical courage. Be able to face anything, and the soldier who entered battle said, 'My frame is shaking now, but I will shake a great deal more when I am through with this battle.' He had a strong moral courage just as a captive who was brought before a king for punishment. The king tried to frighten the captive with his tongue and upon discovering the great moral courage of the man facing him, he said, 'Don't you know that I have the power to hang you?' The captive answered, 'Yes, you have the power to hang me but I have the power to be hanged and to scorn you.' The captive was the more majestic of the two."

Another View of Life

"This stoicism was good as far as it went, but the third person who had listened to the conversation, who had rather sickly eyes, but a stronger brain and better personality of the three, stepped forward to give his view of life. He represented the Christian philosophy, which is a combination of the best of the other two philosophies. He believed in filling the bird so full of joy that it just had to sing. Any one who can do that is a real Christian. He believed in cultivating the muscles in the corner of the mouth that will draw the corners up. There are two kinds of rich men—the one has money to buy anything he wants; the other has little money but knows how to be content in any state of circumstances that he is placed in. Some day the first will find something that his money will not buy. He will be up the stump. He has nothing to fall back on. The other man shall be perfectly content, for he knows that he can get along without the thing that he wants. The second man is the richer. If Paul had been in the captive's place before the king, he would have said, 'You have the power to hang me, but I have the power to be hanged and be loved.'"

Christianity Best

"Christianity is therefore the best of the epicurean and the best of the stoic philosophies combined. But this combination is only for the individual. Power is now needed. The Christian philosophy furnishes this power—the power of an ideal—the power to gain. The boy unconsciously possesses this power. He is a double-decker. The lower deck represents his every-day life—commercialism. The upper deck carries an ideal—a desire. This saves him from being only attracted to the lower deck of commercialism or common, ordinary habits. The time comes to everybody when the two forces, that on the top and that on the lower deck, wage a desperate battle for supremacy over the boy's soul. This country of ours is now undergoing such a struggle, a bitter battle to keep the ideals of our forefathers from being lost.

"The torch soon goes to you boys. Make it representative of a true America. You are engaged in the great enterprise of building a great enterprise—the kingdom of God. You are the living link between the two ages and the responsibility rests on you to carry it over. Individually you can do little. It must be brought about through the Christian church, by unity in the church. That is where that great power is furnished by the Christian philosophy. This is the power of companionship, guided by God. Therefore, the Christian philosophy remains a combination of the best ideals of the stoic and the best of the epicurean, together with that eternal power of God and divine principle."

BALANCE OF TRADE AGAINST GERMANY SHOWS INCREASE

BERLIN.—By The Associated Press.—The trade balance against Germany was considerably increased as result of a large increase in imports and a decrease in exports during October, says a semi-official statement made public Saturday. The statement read:

"German imports during October, according to statistics compiled by the federal government, approximated 531,700,000 gold marks, while export declarations amounted to 298,900,000 gold marks. In consequence of the great increase in imports and a slight decrease in exports the trade balance against Germany was greatly augmented, increasing from about 131,000,000 gold marks in September to 240,000,000 gold marks in October."

"For the period January to October, the adverse trade balance is estimated at 750,000,000 gold marks."

Public Debate

WHAT ABOUT THE PLAN?

Dear Editor: What is the use of paying an expert to draw plans for our city? We can adopt some kind of plan for our city's growth. We have adopted plans for public school buildings, and the city's growth and an attempt should be made to adopt them before we begin to locate new buildings on the fair grounds. We may have a better location for the fair grounds, and these contemplated new buildings should be a part of the city plan.

Wonder what these good citizens, who paid money for having these plans drawn, think? The city plans can be hanging in the Chamber of Commerce. Are they a dream or are they a reality? Like the smoke that goes up from the banquet table, without shape or form, and as soon as it is blown down?

PRO BONO PUBLICO.

THE M'GILVRAY ROAD

Trempealeau, Wisconsin, November 25th, 1922. La Crosse Tribune and Leader-Press, La Crosse, Wisconsin.

Dear Sirs: As a daily reader of your paper I have followed very closely the articles discussed by your readers in the public debate on the proposed road. There are a number of matters of importance that may be brought to the minds of your readers through these columns much better than in any other way.

The "McGilvray bridge" question has been brought up for discussion a great many times during the past twelve or fifteen years and has been discussed a great deal of the time in more or less of a humorous vein, but it is something that is of little importance and would never materialize.

After a great deal of expense and personal effort on the part of a few individuals, a court order was obtained ordering La Crosse county to put the road in condition for travel. After some time La Crosse county finally let the contract for building the road or rather repairing it and refused to build an approach to the bridge. They were afterwards ordered to build the approach, which was done and the road has been under travel since that date or for about three years.

The road can be traveled but is not in condition for any one to travel over with a large car and is full of ruts and chuck holes and the bridge approaches are in very bad condition. Even with this condition the road is in daily use and could and would be used a great deal more if conditions would warrant. I have found with my talks with La Crosse business men that very few know anything about this road and in fact there are a large number that do not know where the bridge and road are located.

The merchants of La Crosse are very active and aggressive in putting on and promoting special sales, Ford days and other entertainments to attract out of town buyers and a small fraction of this energy were put to improving this road they would be repaid in out of town business—not for one special day but every day in the year. The business men have been misled by false propaganda on the possibilities of this road and the time has come when they should look at this road as permanent and a source of trade to their city.

I will venture to say that if this road connected La Crosse and the village of Bangor the road would have been completed years ago with a concrete or macadam surface. If conditions would warrant, this community and surrounding territory are naturally more closely connected with a city of their own state and would prefer to trade with the men who have almost been in the way of an invitation to stay away. The city of La Crosse would no doubt continue to prosper and would gain a check were taken of the trade from this section, they could be somewhat surprised at the totals.

At this fall's session of the Trempealeau county board, the road leading from the main bridge to the village of Trempealeau was placed on the county patrol system and will be kept in first class condition for travel. The road leading from the main bridge to the village of Trempealeau is now being closed and traveled by the county and town of Caladonia. We have done our share on this side and it is up to La Crosse to see that La Crosse county does something, whether it be her share or not, to see that the bottom road is repaired and improved.

Work will be started in the spring on the new road leading through the bottom lands of the river on this side of Starland to the high bridge at Winona. This is a big project for the rebuilding and straightening of this narrow macadam road and will also result in a free bridge over the river at Winona. Unless La Crosse brings some action from the La Crosse county board in the near future it will result in the diverting of a large amount of auto trade from La Crosse to Winona.

The people have been led to believe that it will cost a large sum of money to repair this road which is far from true. There is a very limited amount of gravel on this side of the large bridge and with the La Crosse county quarry directly across the river this side could be leveled off and gravelled out in first class condition for travel for $1,000.00 to $1,500.00 and I know of several men that would gladly do the opportunity to do the work for this amount. This road could have been repaired and traveled with money wasted by the La Crosse county board in refusing to build the approach to the main bridge at the time the contract was let. The city of La Crosse and the La Crosse county board seem to be dominated entirely by the minority members on this particular road proposition and do not take into consideration the interests of their constituents. The people from this locality do not want to expose a concrete road over these bottoms and are only asking a reasonable smooth and safe road with a few planes widened out to enable cars to pass.

The writer feels that the merchants of La Crosse do want business from this territory and that they appreciate the business they are now receiving and their apparent lack of interest in this road and territory is due largely to overwork and lack of knowledge of conditions.

In the recent Ford day entertainment in La Crosse the papers were full of advertisements for outside business. The committees sent out invitations, wired shield placards, and assigned parking places for every town and village within fifty miles of La Crosse, but the writer looked in vain for any mention of this territory. There were very few if any invitations sent here, no placards or any parking place assigned. I believe if the readers of this paper remember the day the McGilvray bridge was opened they will recall that we have a few people in this territory and they own their proportionate share of automobiles.

I do not mention this incident because of the fact that we were not mentioned in Ford day plans on this particular day but we do like to be considered as a community and I mention it to call the attention of the merchants to the fact that we have a territory here extending through all the town of Trempealeau, all of the town of Caladonia and the village of Trempealeau which belongs to La Crosse for out of town trading. This territory is a rich farming country with a valuation taken from the assessors of income report of approximately four million dollars.

It is the hope of the writer that these lines may be read by some one who will take the initiative and see that something is done in some way to improve this road. The La Crosse county board is still in session and it would seem that this body of men would make such an appropriation if the matter were placed before them by the merchants of La Crosse.

In this day and age good roads are an asset to any city and an additional road into the city of La Crosse, no matter where it comes from, will bring additional business and prosperity to the city and a closer and more friendly relationship with the territory which that road serves.

Yours very truly,
L. S. SANDERS,
Trempealeau, Wisconsin.

INDIANS EXPECTED RICH HARVEST FROM BEAVER

COUDERAY, Wis.—Chippewa Indians on the reservation here are very much disappointed over the state closing the season for trapping beaver. What is claimed to be the largest colony of beaver in the state is located on Pipestone and Blueberry creeks on the reservation ten miles northeast of here and the Indians had expected to reap a big harvest this season trapping and selling beaver hides.

My first compliment was given me by a little newsboy. He was telling me about his school teacher and said: "You know, this is the kind of a woman she is."

"Don't you mean lady?" I interrupted.

"No; I mean a woman," he answered, and then, with all the philosophy of eleven years old, added: "Now you are a lady; she's a woman. Anyone can be a woman, but not everyone can be a lady, and that's what you are."—Exchange.

EQUITY SOCIETY TO MEET TUESDAY FOR ANNUAL CONVENTION

Sharp Address Expected to Lay Foundation for "Harmony and Reconstruction"

DEBATE QUESTION OF LOCATING HEADQUARTERS IN MILWAUKEE

Convention Will also Discuss Incorporation of the Society

MADISON, Wis.—By The Associated Press.—An address on "Harmony and Reconstruction" with an explanation of Equity's program for 1923, will open the seventeenth annual convention of the Wisconsin state union, American Society of Equity, at Fond du Lac, Tuesday, December 5.

M. F. Sharp, former national president of the Equity society, is to give the address which Equity members hope will smooth over differences and lay the way for a turn in the society's affairs.

The convention is to be called to order at ten o'clock Tuesday morning by President E. O. Pommerening. After a speech of welcome by the mayor or Fond du Lac, Mr. Sharp will give his address concerning the morning session.

Miss D. Campbell of Michigan, president of the National Milk Producers' association, opens the Tuesday afternoon meeting with an address on milk marketing. His talk will be followed by a report of the committee naming the temporary bodies which will investigate and report on convention business. H. A. Mohlenpach is then to give an address on the "Importance of Organization in the Dairy Industry."

At the evening session a debate is to be held on the question: "Resolved that the state headquarters, business and other departments of the Equity society should be located in Milwaukee." The convention will select participants in the debate and then decide whether a change in location is desired.

The second day of the convention will be opened with reports. President Pommerening will make his annual report, followed by that of the business department, the secretary, and the various departments of the society.

Phil A. Gray of Milwaukee is to speak on the Wisconsin Producers' exposition, explaining its purposes, at the opening of the Wednesday afternoon session. Automobile insurance will then be discussed by Max Schoetz, treasurer of the interstate exchange of Milwaukee. Committee reports follow with a general discussion of these reports and talks on the good and welfare of the organization. Incorporation of the society with the adoption of by-laws will be on the program of the Wednesday evening session. Further reports of committees are to be made Thursday morning, followed by discussion and the adoption of a constitution and by-laws.

Election of officers, the most important work of the convention, will be made Thursday afternoon. A large group of candidates have already announced themselves. Many delegations are instructed to vote for persons not actively seeking office, in an effort to remove the factionalism that is now said to exist.

Friday unfinished business will be taken up and disposed of, followed by adjournment since die in the morning. The board of directors meets in the afternoon to choose an executive board and to discuss policies. The executive board then meets, concluding the work of the convention.

MOVIES

RIVIERA TODAY

"Oathbound" is the interesting title of a new photoplay, produced by William Fox, in which Dustin Farnum is the star, at the Riviera Theatre, tonight.

Critics in other cities who have reviewed this picture have pronounced it one of the finest motion pictures yet produced. From the start of the picture until its finish, it is said, the photoplay is full of action and thrills.

"WHITE SHOULDERS"

Little Richard Headrick, the six-year-old actor who will be seen in support of Katherine MacDonald in her newest starring vehicle, "White Shoulders," coming to the Rivoli Sunday is as near a star as a player of his age can be. Richard won himself a screen following by his performance in "The Child Thou Gavest Me" and is now recognized as one of the most adorable screen kiddies. Despite his extreme youth, Richard is a veteran actor, for he has been seen in many photoplays.

STRAND TODAY

Clarence Smith came into the Wheeler household at a time when the family was about to break up. But that didn't worry him, he'd earned the reputation in the army of being the only man in the A. E. F. who could drive army mules without painting the atmosphere red. So in he started with the Wheeler family and when he had finished his job he had Mr. and Mrs. Wheeler playing turtle doves.

He figures, by the way, in the center of all of these exploits in William de Mille's Paramount production, of "Clarence," which comes to the Strand tonight. Wallace Reid plays this part on the screen, and Agnes Ayres and May McAvoy have the leading feminine roles.

Reverstedt Bros. are an added attraction.

EILEEN PERCY COMING

Eileen Percy, will be seen at the Majestic Theatre, beginning next Sunday, in "Whatever She Wants." The part she plays is that of a wealthy society girl who is determined to learn the routine of business life, despite the protests of her fiancé. She obtains a position secretly in her lover's office, and a series of amazing and most amusing adventures results.

CASINO TODAY

Jackson Gregory probably gives closer study to the selection of titles for his novels than does any other well-known novelist of the day. He is unwilling to start work upon a novel until he has found a title which gives him a grip upon his theme, and that probably is why movie producers have been willing to leave his titles unchanged when his books are produced on the screen.

"Bells of San Juan" is the latest of Gregory's stories to be pictureized. The film version will be shown at the Casino Theatre today. It is a Fox production with Charles Jones in the leading role.

COMMENT ON SINGERS

New York World
Monday, October 9, 1922

What with the Russians holding the Hippodrome and the Italians at Carnegie Hall in the afternoon, it was only fair the Germans should have their innings at the latter house last night. The South German Male Singers, welcomed and assisted by the United Singers of New York and the Badische Harmonie Singing Society, opened their American tour as part of a lengthy programme whose general quality deserved the large audience.

On the banked stage appeared the Sueddeutscher Mannerchor, a triple quartet, met by a warm-hearted avalanche of applause. It was quite like

WINNING STOCK

An announcement sure to please theatregoers is that of the appearance of Mr. Adolph Winninger and his own company at the La Crosse Theatre for six days commencing Tuesday, Dec. 5 in a repertoire of the season's most brilliant successes.

Adolph Winninger's triumphant tour of the country with his own company is one of the notable successes of the present season. It seems as though the public want just what the Adolph Winninger company have to offer. His repertoire of plays have reached the height of popularity and he has spared no expense in surrounding himself with a most notable supporting company, while sumptuous scenic effects and stage settings is carried.

"The Love Bandit" the opening play, is a thrilling company drama never before seen in this territory and promises to be one of the really big hits of the season.

Claims Whiter and Much Cheaper Light Than Electric or Gas

Edison enabled us to enjoy the benefits of electric light. Count Welsbach's mantle made it possible to have the incandescent gas light, but it remained for a Swedish engineer named John son, now living in Chicago, to devise a lamp that would burn ordinary, everyday kerosene oil and produce a light said by the many scientists who have seen it to be whiter than electric. The lamp is as simple to operate as the old style oil lamp, burns without odor, smoke or noise and is proving a sensation where oil light is needed. Mr. Johnson offers to send a lamp on ten days' free trial and will even give one to the first user in each locality who will help introduce it. A letter addressed to C. L. Johnson, 600 W. Lake St., Chicago, will bring full particulars about this wonderful new lamp. He has an interesting agency offer, too.—Advertisement.

WHAT NEW YORK CRITICS SAY:

THE MORNING TELEGRAPH
Monday, October 9, 1922.

The famous South German Male Chorus of Badenia, Germany, with Hans Froehlich, a leading European choral conductor, made its first American appearance at Carnegie Hall last evening. Features of the program were twelve voices heard in four-part glees, and in excerpts from the German grand operas of Wagner and Weber. Better chorus work is impossible.

Chicago drainage canal will not be dismissed as has been reported, but will be actively pushed, according to Attorney General W. J. Morgan, who is in Milwaukee.

Governor Blaine, says Mr. Morgan, has no authority to dismiss the suit, started at the direction of the Wisconsin legislature. A Chicago morning newspaper, in an editorial, set forth that Governor Blaine had decided to dismiss the action, and that this would clear the way for construction of the Great Lakes-Mississippi waterway.
